

Operation Safe Playgrounds – Law Enforcement Partners

More than 140 local state and federal agencies assist CDCR Parole

The California Parole Apprehension Team (CPAT) received considerable assistance from a variety of law enforcement, child safety organizations and regional partners in this statewide historic effort to make contact with as many registered sex offenders as possible.

The establishment of CPAT is part of the recent parole reforms by the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) that directs more intense focus on those individuals that pose the most risk to public safety. However, without the assistance of CDCR GPS Parole Agents, who are charged with tracking all the monitored sex offenders statewide, this strenuous statewide search effort could not have been as comprehensive or precise as it was. In addition, probation departments statewide teamed up with parole staff to include sex offender probation searches in the operation. In addition, organizations such as Internet Crimes Against Children and the Federal Bureau of Investigation provided critical expertise and scanning equipment to run diagnostic equipment on cell phones and computers.

The list below mentions the major partners and agencies that assisted. They are grouped by the four regions that the CDCR Division of Parole Operations is broken into.
